

DESCRIPTIVE ABSTRACT

The object of the invention is a process for the production of a fiber-based armature particularly adapted to be embedded in at least one matrix, characterized in that it consists in performing the following steps:

- preparing a fiber-based material, and
- depositing on at least one of the surfaces of the material thus obtained a repositionable glue.

The invention also covers the obtained armature.